Introduction

Nonprofit accounting in the modern era

You don't change accounting systems often.

However, as your organization grows in size and complexity, you reach a point where manual, time-consuming processes drain your productivity, and flying blind without real-time visibility into key metrics and outcomes is stifling growth. As a good steward, you need a system that leverages the latest technology advancements.

At a minimum, a modern accounting system should automate and streamline core financial management functions such as accounts receivable, accounts payable, and financial close.

But you can hardly fuel your growth and need for accountability and transparency by simply automating the minimum. Nonprofits have accounting, tracking, and reporting needs that require specialized functionality in their financial management systems.

Today, inflexible, inefficient, and outdated on-premises software is rapidly being replaced by a new breed of modern cloud solutions. Over 90 percent of businesses report using cloud solutions today, and nonprofit membership associations are no exception.¹

The pain of dated technology

In addition to external pressures like increased competition for funding, economic shifts creating more demand for services, and government regulations, challenges with internal processes and technology are also creating barriers to mission success.

In a recent survey conducted by Sage Intacct², nonprofit finance leaders said they spend too much time on manual accounting processes and not enough time on strategic work.

They bemoaned a lack of automation that hampered productivity and visibility. They find themselves hamstrung by disparate business and financial systems that do not share data and can't provide the metrics needed for mission-critical decision-making. To gain efficiency and insight, nonprofit finance leaders need better automation, better integration, and better visibility.

SIFMA operates more efficiently across the globe with trusted, secure financials

“Even people who aren’t that confident with technology can get up to speed on Sage Intacct without hand-holding because the workflows are so intuitive. Now that we have secure remote access in the cloud with Sage Intacct, we’ve started hiring on-the-ground resources in London rather than running all of the UK’s finances through our team in New York. It has really changed how we operate.”

~ Sophie Usasz, Managing Director of Finance, SIFMA

NATCO uses greater financial visibility to save more lives

“Instead of just looking at the entire organization, Sage Intacct sheds light on which programs are profitable and which aren’t. For example, we learned that our journal was losing $30,000 per year. This led us to renegotiate contracts and get a new publisher, resulting in a $40,000 gain, which is huge for our small organization. It means we’re not eating into our reserves anymore and can put those funds toward other life-saving programs.”

AMA delivers more value to members with Salesforce integration

“Now that Sage Intacct and Salesforce are completely integrated, we can see data accumulating throughout the month. For example, every time a membership is purchased on our website, it integrates to Sage Intacct immediately. We keep an eye on how much we spend on overhead versus delivering programs. The less we spend running the back of the shop, the more money we have to deliver value to our members.”
